FINDINGS OF FACT

- 1. Respondent operated a licensed talent agency under its own name.
- 2. Petitioner is a model. In or about September, 2009 Petitioner engaged Respondent to act as his agent and represent him in obtaining work in the field of modeling and also in film, television, and commercials.
- 3. The parties did not actually execute a written representation agreement. Respondent's representative, Sergio Garcia, stated that a representation agreement was provided to Petitioner at the time of the engagement, but that through oversight a signed copy of the agreement was never retrieved from Petitioner. For his part, Petitioner does not recall ever seeing a representation agreement. Nonetheless, the testimony of both parties indisputably establishes there was an oral representation agreement, pursuant to which Petitioner agreed to pay Respondent a 20% commission or fee for engagements obtained by Respondent on Petitioner's behalf. This arrangement was confirmed by an "Independent Contractors and Loan Agreement" signed by both parties on September 8, 2009.
- 4. After it had been retained, Respondent obtained a number of engagements for Petitioner on photo shoots. On two of the engagements, Respondent collected the money that was due, deducted its 20% fee, and remitted the balance to Petitioner. On a third engagement, "The Abbey" photo shoot, Respondent collected the money due for the shoot, $250.00, and remitted the entire amount to Petitioner without deducting its commission. At the hearing, Petitioner acknowledged he is making no claim with respect to the two engagements on which a 20% fee was withheld, and also that he was paid in full on all of the engagements obtained for him by Respondent.

| of an | advertis  | ement for underwear. After the shoot was completed, the photograph was     |
| used  | on a larg | ge billboard that was prominently displayed on a major thoroughfare in Los |
| Ange  | eles.     |  |

- 6. Petitioner stated that when he agreed to The Abbey shoot he understood the photograph would only be used in-house, and that he did not know the photo would be placed on a billboard. Petitioner estimated that a shoot contemplating use of a photo on a billboard would have paid more, somewhere between $1,000.00 and $20,000.00. Respondent's representative, Mr. Garcia, stated he had advised Petitioner the photo might be used on a billboard.
- 7. At the hearing, Petitioner acknowledged that whenever a model is hired for a photo shoot the model must sign a release document that authorizes the use of the photos obtained at the shoot in any manner deemed appropriate by the person who hired the model.
- 8. Petitioner also acknowledged that the use of the photo from The Abbey shoot on a billboard had not cost him any loss of future income and that the only effect on him had been a feeling of being duped and a sense of embarrassment arising out of having to admit how little he had been paid for that type of job.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

- 1. Respondent operated as a licensed talent agency.
- 2. Petitioner was an artist who was represented by Respondent.

 $\square$

- 3. This case is within the jurisdiction of the Labor Commissioner under Labor Code section 1700.44, subdivision (a).
  - 4. The claim that Petitioner is asserting in this proceeding is not clear.
- 5. One contention that Petitioner has made is that the Talent Agencies Act (TAA), Labor Code §1700 et seq., was violated because there was no written representation agreement between the parties on a contract form approved by the Labor Commissioner. However, it is established law that a talent agency can represent an artist pursuant to an oral contract and that such a contract will be enforceable. (California Code of Regulations, title 8, section 1002; Beyeler v. Williams Morris Agency, Inc. (Cal. Lab. Com., Sept. 5, 2001) TAC No. 32-00.) In this case, it is undisputable that the parties entered into and performed under an oral representation agreement, and Petitioner has conceded that fact. Consequently, Petitioner is unable to assert a viable claim under the TAA based on the absence of a written representation agreement.
- 6. Another contention the Petitioner advances is that the representation agreement between the parties is "unfair, unjust and oppressive" to Petitioner. (See Lab. Code §1700.23.) Petitioner has made absolutely no showing to support this contention. Under the agreement in this case, Petitioner agreed to pay a 20% commission on all earnings generated by work that Respondent obtained for Petitioner. This 20% commission is precisely the same as the commission specified in the form contract submitted to the Labor Commissioner for review and approved by the Labor Commissioner for use by Respondent. This approval constituted a determination by the Labor Commissioner that the agreement was not unfair, unjust, or oppressive. Furthermore, Petitioner conceded he was making no claim that he was entitled to recoupment of the commissions actually paid to Respondent under the representation agreement. In short, the contention that the agreement was unfair, unjust, and oppressive in unsupported.

- 7. Petitioner also contends the actions of Respondent in connection with securing the engagement for the photo shoot at The Abbey constituted fraud and a misappropriation of Petitioner's image. It is now settled law, however, that the Labor Commissioner is without "jurisdiction to hear and determine tort law claims." (Hecht v. William Morris Agency (Cal. Lab. Com., May 11, 1995) TAC No. 31-92, at p. 8; see id. at pp. 5-9.) Petitioner's claims for damages based on fraud and misappropriation are tort law claims. Accordingly, the Labor commissioner is without jurisdiction to adjudicate such claims.
- 8. Petitioner has not advanced a claim for breach of contract—i.e., a claim that Respondent failed to perform an obligation under the oral representation agreement between the parties. Accordingly, we have no occasion to consider whether such a claim would have been permissible under the TAA in the present context, whether there would have been some plausible factual basis for asserting a viable claim of failure to perform a contractual obligation, whether in the event a claim was viable there would have been evidence sufficient to support a finding of failure to perform, and whether there would have been evidence to support an award of actual or nominal damages.
- 9. In sum, Petitioner has failed to show he has any right whatsoever to recover any amount from the Respondent in this TAA proceeding.
