The above-captioned matter, a Petition to Determine Controversy under Labor Code §1700.44, came on regularly for hearing on October 6, 2006 in Los Angeles, California, before the undersigned attorney for the Labor Commissioner assigned to hear this case. Petitioner DANIEL BROWNING SMITH, An Individual, appeared and was represented by Eric S. Syverson, Esq. of Pick & Boydston, LLP. Respondents CHUCK HARRIS aka OAKY MILLER, An Individual; and VISUAL ARTS GROUP, An Entity of Unknown Form, appeared in pro per.

1 Based on the evidence presented at this hearing and on the other papers on file in 2 this matter, the Labor Commissioner hereby adopts the following decision.

4 FINDINGS OF FACT

5 1. Petitioner DANIEL BROWNING SMITH, (hereinafter, "Petitioner"), is a 6 contortionist performing on television and other entertainment enterprises, including 7 major sporting events throughout the country. He can bend his body like a pretzel and is 8 commonly known as the "Rubberboy." Petitioner has received the Guinness World
9 Record for being the most flexible man on the planet. At the age of 18, Petitioner ran 10 away with the circus. Petitioner is a resident of the State of California.
11

12 2. At all times relevant, Respondent CHUCK HARRIS aka OAKY MILLER
13 who does business as VISUAL ARTS GROUP, (hereinafter, "Respondent"), has been a 14 resident of the State of California. Respondent testified that he has been in the 15 entertainment business for over 60 years working as a personal manager, producer, event
16 planner and creative consultant.

18 3. Petitioner testified that in the Fall of 1998, he was performing in 19 New York when an acquaintance, Tom Robbins, suggested he contact Respondent to see 20 if Respondent could secure some work for Petitioner. Petitioner contacted Respondent
21 and asked him what he needed from him in order to get him work. Petitioner testified 22 that soon thereafter, in 1999, Respondent booked him for "gigs" in London and 23 Singapore and in 2001 began booking Petitioner for the Cary Basketball Association
24 ("CBA") half time shows.
25
26
27
28

4. Per Petitioner, the first CBA half time show that Respondent booked him

1 for was in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. Petitioner stated that he earned $1,500 of which he 2 was paid $1,000. The remaining $500 was kept by Respondent as his fee for booking the
4 gig.

5 5. In May 2003, the parties began working more frequently with each other.
6 During this time, Respondent suggested that Petitioner hire him as his manager. As such,
7 the two entered into an oral management agreement whereby Respondent would provide 8 management services for Petitioner in exchange for a flat fee ($500) on live events and 9 15% of Petitioner's income on television and commercials engagements. Respondent
10 testified that the three most important points of the oral agreement with Petitioner were 11 that: (1) Petitioner could leave anytime he wanted; (2) Respondent would work as 12 Petitioner's personal manager and take 15% from film and television and; (3) if Petitioner
13 terminated the contract, Respondent would still be entitled to payment for an additional 6
14 months from the date of termination.
15
17

18 6. Petitioner testified that during 2003, he had a website which contained 19 information on contacting him for events. All emails received requesting he perform at 20 events were immediately forwarded to Respondent to negotiate the fees and book the 21 dates for him.
22

23 7. Petitioner also testified that in 2003, he started working with Jennifer
24 Chandler, a licensed commercial talent agent. Ms. Chandler's representation was limited
25 to only booking and negotiating commercials for Petitioner. Consequently, the checks 26 received for Petitioner's services on commercials went directly to Ms. Chandler who 27
28

1 would take her commission out and then forward a check to Respondent who took his
2 management commission out. The remainder of the check was then paid to Petitioner.

4 8. Because Ms. Chandler's representation was limited to commercials,
5 Respondent conducted negotiations with the National Basketball Association ("NBA")
6 for Petitioner to perform live at the half time shows. Accordingly, all checks were made
7 out to Respondent and he received his standard $500 fee for these live events he booked.

9 9. Petitioner terminated his oral contract with Respondent on September 20, 10 2004. At the time of his termination, Petitioner still had numerous jobs pending through 11 the Winter of 2005 that had been booked by Respondent. Notwithstanding having 12 terminated the contract, Petitioner honored such jobs by paying Respondent the agreed
13 upon fees and commissions. The following engagements honored after Petitioner 14 terminated the contract were:
15
16

- 17 a. December 13, 2004 Chicago: Petitioner earned $2500: $500 deducted
18 by Respondent for his fee, $2,000 paid to Petitioner by Respondent.
- 19 b. January 5, 2005 - Dallas Mavericks: Petitioner performed but was not 20 paid; Per a letter dated September 22, 2004, Respondent, on behalf of 21 Petitioner, was to be paid $2,500 for this event.
- 22 c. February 4-5, 2005 - Idaho: Petitioner performed but not paid directly 23 after monies paid to Respondent. Instead, Respondent lumped this 24 payment with other engagements (i.e., Charlotte, Idaho and Washington 25 D.C) and deducted money he felt he was entitled to, including 26 engagements that Petitioner procured himself after terminating
27
28

1 Respondent. However, an email sent from Petitioner to Respondent
2 dated November 29, 2004 listed $3,825 as the amount Petitioner
3 believed he would be paid after commissions were paid out to 4 Respondent for this engagement. Petitioner testified that he received 5 $4,500 for both dates and believed that Respondent would take 15% of 6 the total earnings leaving Petitioner with $3,825. Petitioner testified 7 that in the past, they had done other engagements that were two days in 8 a row and Respondent had taken 15% of the total earnings. In this 9 instance, however, Respondent took out $500 per date for a total of 10 $1,000 claiming that Petitioner was only entitled to $3,500 and not 11 $3,825 as Petitioner believed.

12
14
15
16 d. February 9, 2005 – Washington D.C.: Petitioner performed and received 17 $2,500.

19 e. March 28, 2005 – New Orleans: Petitioner performed but did not 20 receive any payment from Respondent. Petitioner confirmed with the 21 New Orleans Hornets by email dated June 8, 2005, that they paid
22 Respondent $2,500. Additionally, a canceled check made payable to 23 Visual Arts Group was submitted as evidence by Petitioner that the 24 check was received and cashed by Respondent.
25

26 10. After terminating his contract with Respondent and honoring the 27 aforementioned engagements that had been booked by Respondent, Petitioner started
28 booking his own performances directly with Respondent's NBA contacts. Respondent

1 took this as an ultimate betrayal by Petitioner. In an email to Petitioner dated March 14,
2 2005, Respondent states:

4 "As you know, I worked very hard on your behalf, I am
5 the best personal manager for small time performers in 6 the world. Getting you $2,500 for a six minute act for 7 a [sic] who is a contortionist speaks for itself." [Emphasis
8 added.]

9 11. Notwithstanding the foregoing statement, Respondent testified that during 10 the time he represented Petitioner, he never sought to procure employment for Petitioner.
11 In support of this position, Respondent submitted several letters from various individuals
12 he has worked with in the entertainment industry who attest that he has never asked them
13 to book talent that he represents and that he has never solicited business for his clients
14 unless it was on a show that he produced. Additionally, Respondent described his 15 relationship with Petitioner as being one of employer and employee. Specifically, 16 Respondent testified that Petitioner was his employee. He sold Petitioner's services to 17 third parties such as the NBA for half time performances and this is why the contracts
18 and checks were always sent to his attention rather than to Petitioner. Furthermore,
19 Petitioner described the arrangement with Petitioner on the live events as a buy/sell 20 arrangement. Respondent explained this concept as such:

21
22 "A buy/sell in the industry takes you out of the realm of 23 being a personal manager or an agent and takes you in the 24 realm of being a producer, an event planner, a party planner
25 or being a creative consultant the same way as Steven 26 Spielberg buys Whoopi Goldberg for X number of dollars to 27 be in a film, the same way as a loan out would loan out a star, 28 sometimes for much more than a star made. It is an industry standard in the business. When you go to a party planner and she charges you for an act, that is called a buy/sell. It's very

1 standard and done all the time.”

3 However, contrary to Respondent’s testimony and the foregoing evidence he 4 submitted in support thereof, Petitioner introduced various emails showing that 5 Respondent had been procuring work for Petitioner during the term of their oral 6 management contract.

- 7
8 • Petitioner submitted a copy of a contract written on 9 Respondent’s letterhead for Petitioner to perform at the 10 halftime show for the Chicago Bulls’ December 8, 2003
11 game located in Chicago for a performance fee of $2,000.
12 The contract specifies that payment is to be paid to Visual 13 Arts Group after the show and is signed by Chuck Harris
14 Visual Arts Group.
15
- 16
17 • Likewise, Petitioner also submitted a copy of a contract
18 written on Respondent’s letterhead from Petitioner to 19 perform at the halftime show for the Washington Wizards’
20 February 9, 2005 game in Washington D.C. for a 21 performance fee of $2,500, also to be paid directly to Visual 22 Arts Group. This contract was also signed by Chuck Harris
23 Visual Arts Group.
24
- 25
26 • In an email dated March 15, 2005, after the parties had 27 formally terminated their relationship and were disputing
28 outstanding commission payments, Respondent wrote to

1 Petitioner, "If I want to book you on a date and you want
2 the date then and only then will we work together."

4 [Emphasis added].

- 5 • In an email dated March 17, 2005, further disputing the 6 outstanding amounts owed, Respondent wrote to Petitioner,
7 "By your own admission you did three games that I
8 worked by [sic] butt off to get for you this comes to 9 $1,500 and you also owe me $300 for the one Carnival
10 television show you did, I assume you got the full $2,000 a 11 show or weekly that I also worked my butt off to get 12 you." [Emphasis added]. Later in the same email, 13 Respondent writes, "As soon as you appear at the two more
14 games we have booked together, and I receive the monies
15 in full, Dallas and New Orleans, I will send you the full 16 amount due you." And, "I also need to make sure, which 17 we are checking into now, did you do the show in India
18 and a show in Spain, which I worked my butt of [sic] to 19 get you." [Emphasis added].
- 20 • In an email dated March 21, 2005 to Petitioner, Respondent
21 writes, "As you know, I have a major basketball job for 22 you on April 3rd which we discussed many times already,
23 as well as the show in Paris." [Emphasis added].

- In an email dated November 5, 2005 from Chuck Harris under the email address “Worldwide Management” to a representative from Beacher Madhouse at the Hard Rock Hotel and Casino containing the proposed contract terms for Petitioner to appear at Beacher’s Madhouse at the Hard Rock Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, Nevada on November 6, 2005, Respondent states that “any and all future bookings with Daniel Smith aka ‘Rubber Boy’ for Beacher’s Madhouse, must be made through Visual Arts Group @ 323.933.9161.” [Emphasis added].
  - In an email dated August 14, 2006, Petitioner writes to John Woodman, who was responsible for handling the booking for halftime performances for the Charlotte Bobcats, asking to confirm that Petitioner booked an event for him for January 28, 2005. In response, Mr. Woodman writes back that Chuck Harris was their contact when booking Petitioner, that Chuck Harris negotiated the price Petitioner would be paid for his performance and that the Bobcats paid Petitioner via Chuck Harris and Visual Arts Group the sum of $2,500 for Petitioner’s performance. [Emphasis added].

12. Based on the foregoing, Petitioner claims that Respondent is not entitled to

1 any of the monies collected in connection with such engagements because Respondent
2 acted as an unlicensed talent agent in violation of the Talent Agencies Act, ("Act").

4 LEGAL ANALYSIS

5 1. Petitioner is an artist as defined in Labor Code §1700.4(b).

6 2. At all times relevant herein, Respondent was not licensed as a talent
7 agency.

9 3. Labor Code §1700.5 provides that "no person shall engage in or carry on 10 the occupation of a talent agency without first procuring a license therefore from the 11 Labor Commissioner." The term "talent agency" is defined at Labor Code §1700.4(a) as 12 a "person or corporation who engages in the occupation of procuring, offering, promising 13 or attempting to procure employment or engagements for an artist or artists, except that 14 the activities of procuring, offering or promising to procure recording contracts for an 15 artist or artists shall not of itself subject a person or corporation to regulation and 16 licensing."
17

18 4. The testimony and evidence presented at this hearing clearly establishes 19 that Respondent procured employment for Petitioner.
20

21 5. The issue then becomes whether Respondent was required to hold a talent 22 agency license if he was booking the foregoing engagements for himself as a producer or 23 creative consultant. Respondent argues that he employed Petitioner and that he would sell
24 Petitioner's services just as he would buy a bottle of water for 50 cents and turn around 25 and sell it to the NBA for 1 dollar. Furthermore, Respondent argues that all contracts he 26
27
28

1 made on Petitioner's behalf were made with his company and the team directly. In other
2 words, his company sold Petitioner's services to third parties such as the NBA.

4 6. We have held that a person or entity who employs an artist does not procure 5 employment within the meaning of Labor Code section 1700.4 by directly engaging the 6 services of the artist. Chinn v. Tobin, TAC 17-96. In Chinn, petitioners argued that their 7 former manager, with whom they had both an artists agreement and a management
8 agreement, procured employment for them in violation of the Talent Agencies Act
9 ("Act") by obtaining their songwriting services for his own music publishing business.
10 We dismissed the petition because no evidence was presented to indicate that respondent 11 procured, offered, attempted or promised to procure employment for petitioners with 12 respect to petitioners' song writing services, for any person or entity other than the 13 respondent himself and respondent's music publishing business. We held,
14
16

17 "We do not believe that this alone would establish a violation
18 of the Talent Agencies Act, in that a person or entity who employs 19 an artist does not 'procure employment' for that artist within the 20 meaning of Labor Code section 1700.4(a), by directly engaging the 21 services of that artist. Instead, we hold that the 'activity of procuring 22 employment,' under the Talent Agencies Act, refers to the role an 23 agent plays when acting as an intermediary between the artist whom 24 the agent represents and the third-party employer who seeks to engage 25 the artist's services."

26 Chinn at p.6-7.

27 7. In the Chinn decision, we discussed (and distinguished) two other decisions
28 on point: Church v. Brown, TAC 52-92 and Humes v. Margil Ventures, Inc., TAC 19-81.
In Church, the respondent, also an unlicensed talent agent, was a casting director for a production company when he hired the petitioner actor in the film that his production

1 company was producing. We noted, " there is no requirement that a casting director
2 employed by a production company and who works exclusively for that production
3 company be licensed as a talent agent in order to hire actors to work for the production
4 company." Church at p.8. However, unlike in the Chinn case, the hearing officer in 5 Church found that the respondent violated the Talent Agencies Act when he acted outside
6 the scope of his employment as a casting director. Specifically, the respondent created a 7 false resume for the petitioner actor, containing several false credits regarding the 8 petitioner's prior work, as a means of ensuring that the petitioner would get hired by the 9 production company. Additionally, following the completion of the film, the respondent
10 undertook continuous efforts to procure employment for the petitioner with third party 11 employers and repeatedly promised the petitioner that he would procure such 12 employment.

13
14
15
16
17 8. Likewise, in the Humes case, the parties formed a theatrical production
18 company wherein petitioner was a purported employee. The hearing officer found that 19 the company was a "theatrical production company" in name only. That is, it was not 20 engaged in the production of any entertainment or theatrical enterprises, but rather, 21 merely functioned as a loan out company for providing the petitioner's artistic services to 22 third party producers. These third party producers were the persons or entities with 23 whom petitioner was seeking employment. Thus, the respondent's efforts in procuring 24 and attempting to procure employment for the petitioner with these third party producers,
25 violated the Talent Agencies Act.

26
27
28 9. We find the facts of this case distinguishable from Chinn and more similar

1 to the Church and Humes cases. Although Respondent argues he employed Petitioner
2 and that he was, in addition to being a personal manager, also a producer and creative 3 consultant, the evidence he presented does not show that he was acting as a producer or 4 creative consultant on any of the engagements he procured for Petitioner which are at 5 issue. Unlike the Chinn case, Respondent did not prove that he was engaging the 6 services of Petitioner for himself on the CBA and NBA halftime performances and other
7 events he admits he procured for Petitioner. Merely stating that he was Petitioner's
8 employer or that it was a buy/sell arrangement, in and of itself, is not sufficient to meet
9 his burden in proving that he actually acted as an employer or producer when procuring 10 engagements for Petitioner. "The court, or as here, the Labor Commissioner is free to 11 search out illegality lying behind the form in which the transaction has been cast for the 12 purpose of concealing such illegality." Buchwald v. Superior Court (1967) 254
13 Cal.App.2d 347, 355.

18 10. In Chinn, the petitioners had two separate agreements with respondent: one
19 for personal management services and a separate "Artist Agreement." Under the "Artist 20 Agreement", petitioners agreed to render their "exclusive recording services" to 21 respondent; the respondent would be the sole owner of all master recordings recorded 22 during the term of the agreement; the respondent would have exclusive rights to 23 manufacture records from these master recordings, and to permit the public performance
24 of these recordings; the respondent would hold the publishing rights to any compositions 25 recorded by petitioners; and the respondent could subsequently assign all or part of these 26 rights to a publishing company. No such type of agreement was present in this case. The 27
28

1 only agreement the parties had was an oral personal management agreement. Nor was 2 there any evidence that parties operated under any type of agreement. Rather, it is clear
3 that the parties were operating solely as manager and client. No evidence was presented
4 that Petitioner ever considered himself to be an employee of Respondent's. Further,
5 Petitioner testified that Respondent never used the terms "buy/sell" with him and 6 explained that he only paid him $500 for the live events because Respondent booked
7 them for him. When Petitioner terminated his relationship with Respondent, he contacted
8 the third parties whom Respondent had booked the NBA gigs through to let them know
9 that Respondent was no longer his personal manager. Furthermore, the parties' 10 understanding that they were always operating as manager and client is supported by 11 statements made by Respondent to Petitioner in emails such as: "As you know, I worked 12 very hard on your behalf, I am the best personal manager for small time performers in 13 the world. Getting you $2,500 for a six minute act for a [sic] who is a contortionist 14 speaks of itself."<sup>1</sup> And,

15
16
17
18
19
20 "For the record I know you called Kenny Glenn and others to 21 complain about me. That does not negate the fact that you owe
22 me money for my hard work, I am a manger [sic] not an agent
23 and we had a contract, not written, but a contract nevertheless.
24 It is called an implied contract. Do you think I would have 25 worked by [sic] butt off for you, knowing that you would drop
26 me in the middle of the basketball season, or the television season
27 or even the commercial season, NO NO NO!"<sup>2</sup>

28

1 Also, on the Beacher Madhouse event held at the Hard Rock Hotel and Casino in Las 2 Vegas, Nevada, a dispute arose between the promoter for Beacher Madhouse and 3 Respondent because the promoter would not agree to providing a hotel room and airfare
4 for Respondent, whom he referred to as “petitioner’s agent” (in addition to providing a 5 hotel room and airfare for Petitioner).<sup>3</sup> Thus, even third parties negotiating deals with 6 Respondent on Petitioner’s behalf, viewed Respondent not as Petitioner’s employer, but 7 instead, as Petitioner’s agent. Accordingly, the evidence submitted supports a finding 8 that at all times relevant, Respondent was acting as a talent agent without being licensed
9 by the State of California.

12
13 11. Nor was any evidence presented that Respondent was acting at the request 14 of and in conjunction with a licensed talent agent when he procured the numerous 15 engagements for Petitioner as he states in his response to the petition. While Petitioner
16 did have a licensed talent agent during part of the period that Respondent represented 17 him, she was a commercial talent agent and had no part in procuring any engagements for 18 Petitioner other than commercial engagements. Thus, under the Act, Respondent does 19 not have a valid defense to his unlawful activity.

20
22 12. An agreement that violates the licensing requirement of the Act is 23 illegal and unenforceable. “Since the clear object of the Act is to prevent improper 24 persons from becoming [talent agents] and to regulate such activity for the protection of 25 the public, a contract between an unlicensed [agent] and an artist is void.” Buchwald v.

1 Superior Court, supra 254 Cal.App.2d 347 at 351. Having determined that a person or a
2 business entity procured, promised or attempted to procure employment for an artist
3 without the requisite talent agency license, “the [Labor] Commissioner may declare the 4 contract [between the unlicensed agent and the artist] void and unenforceable as 5 involving the services of an unlicensed person in violation of the Act.” Styne v. Stevens
6 (2001) 26 Cal.4th 42, 55. “[A]n agreement that violates the licensing requirement is 7 illegal and unenforceable....” Waisbren v. Peppercorn Productions, Inc., (1995)41
8 Cal.App.4th 246, 262.

10
11
12 13. Respondent also argues that to the extent we find that he procured
13 employment on behalf of Petitioner in violation of the Act, that the doctrine of 14 severability of contracts applies. Respondent relies on Marathon v. Entertainment, Inc. v.
15 Blasi (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1001, which at the time of this hearing had been ordered 16 depublished due to the Supreme Court granting review on September 20, 2006.
17 Nonetheless, Respondent argues that the doctrine of severability of contracts could apply
18 to sever the illegal from the legal elements of an agreement between an artist and a 19 manager, as the Court of Appeal held. As we recently stated in our decision in Cham v.
20 Spencer/Cowings, TAC 19-05 (determination issued on July 27, 2007), our long standing 21 position, which is supported by case law and legislative history, is that a contract under 22 which an unlicensed party procures or attempts to procure employment for an artist is 23 void ab initio and the party procuring the employment is barred from recovering
24 payments for any activities under the contract, including activities for which a talent
25 agency license is not required. See Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal.App.4th 1089, 1103-1104;
26
27

1 Styne v. Stevens, supra, 26 Cal.4th at 51; Park v. Deftones (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 1465,
2 1470; Waisbren v. Peppercorn Productions, supra, 41 Cal.App.4th at 1470.

4 14. Consistent with our long standing position and with current case law as 5 stated above, we find that the oral Management Agreement entered into between the 6 parties herein is void ab initio.
