Your rights as a worker are enforced and protected by the California Department of Industrial Relations, Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE). DLSE investigates and resolves complaints about discrimination, wages, child labor, hours of work and working conditions.

Whether you are a documented or undocumented worker in California, you have rights protected by state laws that guarantee payment of wages for work performed. It is the policy of the California Department of Industrial Relations not to question your immigration status.

Here are some rights that protect your working conditions:

1. The right to be paid the minimum wage and accept gratuities (tips)
   You are to be paid no less than minimum wage of $9.00 per hour, whether the pay is measured by time, piece rate, commission or other method of calculation. With few exceptions, all wages earned are due and payable at a minimum of twice during each calendar month on your regular payday. Tips cannot be used as payment toward the minimum wage.

2. The right to a net 10-minute rest period
   You must be permitted to take a net 10-minute rest period for every four hours worked or major fraction thereof which to the extent possible shall be in the middle of each work period. If your employer does not provide you a rest period, your employer must pay you one additional hour of pay at your regular rate of pay for each workday the rest period is not allowed.

3. The right to a meal period
   You are entitled to a meal period of at least 30 minutes if you work more than five hours. You must be relieved of all work duty during your meal period. Each workday you are not provided a meal period, or you perform work during your meal period, your employer must pay you one additional hour of pay at your regular rate of pay. You have the right to a clean meal and rest area.

4. The right to file a workers’ compensation claim if you are injured on the job
   If you are injured on the job, your employer must provide you with medical care. Depending on the extent of your injury you may have the right to medical treatment, rehabilitation and job training at no cost to you. For fact sheets, information and assistance in filing a workers’ compensation claim, call toll free: 1-800-736-7401 or visit www.dir.ca.gov and click on the Division of Workers’ Compensation. You have the right to process your workers’ compensation claim and are protected from termination.

5. The right to be provided tools and supplies necessary to do your work
   Tools, supplies and uniforms (required by your employer) should be provided and maintained by your employer at no cost to you. If you earn two times the minimum wage, you may be asked to provide and maintain the hand tools required to do your work (i.e. chef knives, cooking utensils). Your employer must provide you with regular workplace health and safety training. If you are required to use your own vehicle for work-related responsibilities or purchase gasoline for a company vehicle, your employer must reimburse those expenses and compensate you for your travel time.

6. The right to a pay stub or wage statement every time you are paid your wages
   Whether you are paid by check, in cash or otherwise, you must receive a pay stub or a written wage statement showing among other things: your employer’s name, address and telephone number; your name; either your employee ID number or the last 4 digits of your social security number; gross wages earned; all deductions; and the dates for the period you are being paid. You have the right to a regularly scheduled payday and your employer must comply with the established payday. Your employer also has the legal obligation to keep records about you, your work hours and your pay.

You may be entitled to overtime or double time pay to receive double time rate (twice your hourly rate) if you work more than eight hours per workday or 40 hours per work week. If you work more than eight hours in any workday or more than six days beyond eight hours in any workday or more than six days in any workweek is permissible provided the employee is compensated for the overtime. If you are a nonexempt employee who is paid a salary, you may also qualify for overtime. Contact the DLSE if you have questions.

You have the right (free from retaliation) to process your wage claim, attend hearings to recover unpaid wages and investigate retaliation complaints. You may discuss labor issues with the DLSE and/or your employer under protection of the law and your employer may not discharge, demote, suspend or discipline you in any manner for this reason. You may file a complaint with the labor commissioner for reinstatement, full back pay, and any other appropriate remedy if you feel you were discharged because you engaged in such activity.

Wage claim tip: Keep your own time records. Write down every day the time you begin work, when you end work, the time you take meal and rest breaks, the total hours you work and record your hourly rate.

The right to be paid every time your employer asks you to report to work
Each workday you are required to report for work and you do report, but you are not put to work or furnished less than half of your usual or scheduled hours a day, you shall be paid for half the usual or scheduled day’s work, but in no event for less than two hours nor more than four hours, at your regular rate of pay.

The right to be paid all wages by your employer the same day you are terminated or within 72 hours of a voluntary quit
If you are terminated, your employer must pay wages due immediately. If you voluntarily quit without giving 72 hours prior notice, your employer must pay you within 72 hours. If your employer fails to pay you, they may be penalized and required to pay you the equivalent of one-day’s salary for each day delayed in paying your wages (up to a maximum of 30 days).

The right to file a wage claim, a discrimination complaint or speak to the California labor commissioner regardless of your immigration status and without retaliation from your employer
You have the right to file a wage claim, attend hearings to recover unpaid wages and investigate retaliation complaints. You may discuss labor issues with the DLSE and/or your employer under protection of the law and your employer may not discharge, demote, suspend or discipline you in any manner for this reason. You may file a complaint with the labor commissioner for reinstatement, full back pay, and any other appropriate remedy if you feel you were discharged because you engaged in such activity.

Wage claim tip: Keep your own time records. Write down every day the time you begin work, when you end work, the time you take meal and rest breaks, the total hours you work and record your hourly rate.

The right to be paid a split shift
Split shift is a work schedule interrupted by non-paid and non-working time periods established by your employer (and it is not a rest or a meal period). If you are paid the minimum wage and work a split shift, you may be entitled to an additional one-hour’s pay at the minimum wage.

The right to be paid overtime
Unless you work under a legally adopted alternative workweek schedule, you should be paid overtime pay (one-and-one-half of your regular rate of pay) if you work more than eight hours per workday or 40 hours per week. If you work more than 12 hours per workday, you are entitled to receive double time rate (twice your hourly rate). You may be entitled to overtime or double time pay even if you work less than 40 hours per week.

Eight hours of labor constitutes a day’s work, and employment beyond eight hours in any workday or more than six days in any workweek is permissible provided the employee is compensated for the overtime. If you are a nonexempt employee who is paid a salary, you may also qualify for overtime. Contact the DLSE if you have questions.
