We previously granted applicant’s petition for reconsideration to further study the factual and legal issues in this case. This is our Opinion and Decision After Reconsideration. Applicant sought reconsideration of the April 18, 2006 Findings of Fact and Order, wherein the workers’ compensation administrative law judge (“WCJ”) found that defendant’s initial objection to the treating physician’s request for spinal surgery was timely; that the procedure instituted by the Division of Workers’ Compensation (“DWC”) Medical Unit, requiring utilization review and appeal from a denial of spinal surgery before the Administrative Director (“AD”) selects a second opinion surgeon under Labor Code section 4062(b), was contemplated by sections 4062 and 4610; and that the Medical Unit’s referral of the matter for a second opinion was, therefore, timely. The WCJ denied applicant’s request for surgery, without prejudice, pending the second opinion.

Applicant contended the Medical Unit violated section 4062 when it rejected and failed to act on defendant’s initial and timely objection to the treating physician’s request for spinal surgery.

1 Commissioner Murray, who was on the panel that granted reconsideration, was unavailable for the decision in this matter. Commissioner Rabine was appointed to take her place.

surgery; that the Medical Unit lacked authority to require a second request in the form of an appeal from a utilization review denial, before acting on the objection; and that the remedy for the Medical Unit’s failure to select a second opinion surgeon within 10 days after receipt of defendant’s objection, and for the failure of the second opinion surgeon to issue a report with 45 days of the request for surgery, should be that defendant is required to authorize the surgery.

We have considered the Petition for Reconsideration and the WCJ’s Report and Recommendation on Petition for Reconsideration, and we have reviewed the record in this matter. We have not received an Answer from defendant.

For the reasons discussed below, we will reverse the decision of the WCJ and hold that, in response to a treating physician’s recommendation for spinal surgery, an employer has the following options: 1) authorize the surgery, 2) object to the surgery, pursuant to section 4062(b), by filing a DWC Form 233 within 10 days of receipt of the doctor’s recommendation, 3) submit the recommendation to utilization review, or 4) pursue both options 2 and 3, either simultaneously or by filing an objection after a utilization review denial, meeting the timelines for each process. If the employer denies the surgery pursuant to its utilization review, the employee must object within 10 days of receipt by the employee of the employer’s denial. The dispute will then be resolved under the second opinion procedures in section 4062(b).

In a case such as this, where the defendant has followed the statutory procedures and timelines, and the delay is due solely to the DWC’s failure to comply with its obligation under section 4062(b), there is no reasonable basis for terminating the second opinion process. It should be completed, followed by a decision by the WCJ on the merits.

BACKGROUND

The parties stipulated that applicant sustained an industrial injury to her spine on April 22, 2002, while employed by defendant as a photographer. The issue of other body parts injured was deferred.

Having failed to control applicant’s pain with other measures, treating physician Dr. Park requested approval for trial of spinal cord stimulation on February 10, 2006. Defendant referred this request for surgery to utilization review and, on February 17, 2006, denied Dr. Park’s request, based on the utilization review report. Copies of the denial letter were sent to applicant and her attorney.

Additionally, on February 21, 2006, defendant filed a DWC Form 233 Objection To Treating Physician’s Recommendation For Spinal Surgery with the Administrative Director. Applicant does not now dispute the timeliness of defendant’s objection.3

By letter, dated March 3, 2006, the DWC Medical Unit returned defendant’s Form 233 objection for the following reason:

“Once the Utilization Review process has been completed and the UR has made a determination and does not certify the procedure, the injured worker has to send in their appeal by having his/her treating physician file an appeal if his/her treating physician still wishes to continue with the recommended procedure. You then have 10 days from receipt of the second request of treating physician’s report containing the recommendation for spinal surgery . . .” (Joint Exhibit 6.) (Emphasis in original.)4

A copy of this letter was sent to Dr. Park.

Dr. Park again requested a spinal cord stimulator trial by letter dated March 3, 2006. Declaring that the second request was received on March 15, 2006, defendant again objected on Form 233 on March 24, 2006, and requested assignment of a second opinion physician by the Administrative Director. On April 4, 2006, the Medical Unit designated Dr. Shortz for the spinal surgery second opinion.

Trial was held on April 18, 2006, on the following issues:

“1. Applicant’s entitlement to a spinal cord stimulator trial;

“2. Whether defendant timely objected to the request for spinal surgery

3 Labor Code section 4062(b) requires that an employer’s objection to a treating physician’s recommendation of spinal surgery be filed within 10 days. At trial, applicant contended that defendant’s February 21, 2006 objection to the February 10, 2006 recommendation was untimely, since it was filed on the 11th day. Because February 20, 2006, was a holiday, the period in which an objection could be filed was extended to February 21, 2006. (Gov. Code §§6707, 6700-6706; see also, Code Civ. Proc., §§10, 12-12b.)

4 The Medical Unit’s letter seems to imply that the employee is to object to a utilization review denial by resubmitting the request for surgery to the employer.
such as to trigger the requirement for a second opinion as set forth in Labor Code Section 4062(b);

“3. Whether the Division of Workers’ Compensation Medical Unit appropriately followed procedures set forth in Labor Code Sections 4062(b) and 4610. What the proper remedy is if DWC fails to follow appropriate procedure. Specifically, applicant is objecting to the Medical Unit requiring a second opinion and extending the 45 days within which to obtain a second surgical opinion by requiring the treating physician to object to an appeal of the UR doctor’s opinion.” (Minutes of Hearing, p. 2.)

The record does not indicate when or if Dr. Shortz issued his opinion on the requested spinal surgery.

DISCUSSION

This case presents novel issues regarding the interplay between section 4062, which concerns objections to treating physician recommendations, and the utilization review statute, section 4610, enacted in Senate Bill (“SB”) 228, Stats 2003, ch.639. Section 4062, as amended by SB 228 and by SB 899, effective April 19, 2004, provides, in pertinent part,

“(a) If either the employee or employer objects to a medical determination made by the treating physician concerning any medical issues not covered by Section 4060 or 4061 and not subject to Section 4610, the objecting party shall notify the other party in writing of the objection within 20 days of receipt of the report if the employee is represented by an attorney or within 30 days of receipt of the report if the employee is not represented by an attorney. Employer objections to the treating physician’s recommendation for spinal surgery shall be subject to subdivision (b), and after denial of the physician’s recommendation, in accordance with Section 4610. If the employee objects to a decision made pursuant to Section 4610 to modify, delay, or deny a treatment recommendation, the employee shall notify the employer of the objection in writing within 20 days of receipt of that decision. These time limits may be extended for good cause or by mutual agreement. If the employee is represented by an attorney, a medical evaluation to determine the disputed medical issue shall be obtained as provided in Section 4062.2, and no other medical evaluation shall be obtained. If the employee is not represented by an attorney, the employer shall immediately provide the employee with a form prescribed by the medical director with which to request assignment of a panel of three qualified medical evaluators, the evaluation shall be obtained as provided in Section 4062.1, and no other medical evaluation shall be obtained.

“(b) The employer may object to a report of the treating physician recommending that spinal surgery be performed within 10 days of the receipt of the report. If the employee is represented by an attorney, the parties shall seek agreement with the other party on a California licensed board-certified or board-eligible orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon to prepare a second opinion report resolving the disputed surgical recommendation. If no agreement is reached within 10 days, or if the employee is not represented by an attorney, an orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon shall be randomly selected by the administrative director to prepare a second opinion report resolving the disputed surgical recommendation. Examinations shall be scheduled on an expedited basis. The second opinion report shall be served on the parties within 45 days of receipt of the treating physician’s report. If the second opinion report recommends surgery, the employer shall authorize the surgery. If the second opinion report does not recommend surgery, the employer shall file a declaration of readiness to proceed. The employer shall not be liable for medical treatment costs for the disputed surgical procedure, whether through a lien filed with the appeals board or as a self-procured medical expense, or for periods of temporary disability resulting from the surgery, if the disputed surgical procedure is performed prior to the completion of the second opinion process required by this subdivision.” (Emphasis added.)

AD Rule 9788.1(a) (Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §9788.1(a).) provides,

“An employer who objects to the treating physician’s recommendation for spinal surgery shall serve the objection, by mail or other rapid means of delivery, on the Administrative Director, the employee, the employee’s attorney, if any, and on the treating physician within 10 days of receipt of the treating physician’s report containing the recommendation. The objection shall be written on the form prescribed by the Administrative Director in Section 9788.11 . . .”

Rule 9788.11 contains the Form for Employer’s Objection To Report Of Treating Physician Recommending Spinal Surgery, DWC Form 233.

Section 4610(g)(3)(A), provides that, if, pursuant to utilization review, a physician’s request for treatment “is not approved in full, disputes shall be resolved in accordance with Section 4062. If a request to perform spinal surgery is denied, disputes shall be resolved in accordance with subdivision (b) of Section 4062.” (Emphasis added.)

Section 4062(a) addresses recommendations for spinal surgery in only one sentence: “Employer objections to the treating physician’s recommendation for spinal surgery shall be subject to subdivision (b), and after denial of the physician’s recommendation, in accordance with Section 4610.” This sentence, in combination with the other provisions cited above, establishes two tracks, each leading to the spinal surgery second opinion process in section 4062(b).

The first track, the employer’s objection, is simple and direct. The single sentence in section 4062(a) provides that employer objections shall be subject to section 4062(b). Section 4062(b) and AD Rule 9788.1 spell out the employer’s and the AD’s responsibilities in resolving spinal surgery disputes: The employer may object on DWC Form 233 within 10 days of receipt of the treating physician’s recommendation. If no agreement is reached with a represented employee on a second opinion surgeon within 10 days, or if the employee is unrepresented, the AD shall randomly select an orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon to examine the employee and prepare a report resolving the dispute. In the present case, the employer did object within 10 days. The AD, however, did not follow up with the selection of a second opinion surgeon.

The second track, the employee’s objection to a denial of the physician’s recommendation, is more convoluted, and is explained in detail below. In brief, when an employer denies spinal surgery, based upon its utilization review, the employee has 10 days from receipt of that denial to file an objection with the AD. A second opinion surgeon must then be selected pursuant to section 4062(b).

The employee’s track begins with section 4062(a)’s reference to section 4610 and the denial of the physician’s recommendation, and with the language of section 4610(g)(3)(A). These provisions envision the possibility of utilization review of a recommendation for spinal surgery. If the employer conducts utilization review, and the requested surgery is denied, the employee is then obligated to object under section 4062(a), if he or she still desires the surgery. (See Willette v. Au

Section 4062 refers to the treating physician’s “recommendation” for spinal surgery. Section 4610(g)(3)(A) refers to a “request” to perform spinal surgery. We see no significant difference between the two terms and use them interchangeably.
Electric Corp. (2004) 69 Cal.Comp.Cases 1298, 1303 (Appeals Board en banc).) Ordinarily, an applicant would have 20 days to notify the employer of its objection to a utilization review denial, pursuant to section 4062(a); but section 4610(g)(3)(A) specifically provides that disputes regarding denials of spinal surgery be resolved under section 4062(b). Section 4062(b), however, refers only to employer objections, which must be made within 10 days. The 20-day period for objecting to a utilization review denial set forth in section 4062(a) is general; it does not refer specifically to spinal surgery requests. Indeed, the only reference to spinal surgery in section 4062(a) deals with employer objections and says that they shall be subject to subdivision (b). Thus, the only specific reference to employee objections to an employer’s denial of spinal surgery is the requirement of section 4610(g)(3)(A) that the dispute be resolved under section 4062(b).

Given the separate and expedited procedures for spinal surgery and the specific references to section 4062(b) in sections 4062(a) and 4610(g)(3)(A), we believe the time period, within which an applicant must object to a utilization review denial of a request for spinal surgery, is 10 days from receipt of the denial. This time period is parallel to the time for an employer to object and is not likely to pose a hardship, since the treating physician will already have issued the request. No specific format has yet been established for the applicant to object to the denial; but the employee’s objection, like the employer’s section 4062(b) objection, should be directed to the AD, and not be delayed by going to the employer first and then to the AD, as an attachment to an employer objection to the second request.

In this case, defendant pursued option 4, objecting under section 4062(b) and seeking utilization review. Both actions were timely. The Medical Unit failed to act on the initial section 4062(b) objection and waited until defendant, acting on its advice, objected a second time, after receiving a second request for surgery from Dr. Park.

Section 4062(b) requires that the second opinion report be served on the parties within 45 days of receipt of the treating physician’s report. The Medical Unit’s scheme delays the commencement of this 45 day period until after the treating physician appeals the utilization review denial to the employer. This delay cannot be justified by the statutory language and is an unwarranted obstacle for the employee seeking surgery.

Moreover, the procedure contemplated by the Medical Unit overlooks that an employer need not always conduct utilization review. (Sandhagen v. Cox & Cox Construction (2005) 70 Cal.Comp.Cases 208, 212. (Appeals Board en banc).) It is likely that an employer will bypass utilization review in many cases and simply object under section 4062(b). A reason why an employer might bypass utilization review is that, if an employer undertakes utilization review and the utilization review report concludes that surgery is justified, the dispute over surgery is over. There is no provision for an employer to dispute the utilization review recommendation. At that point, the defendant has lost its right to a second opinion by a “California licensed board-certified or board-eligible orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon” under section 4062(b). It must provide the surgery. Rather than be bound by a possible positive recommendation by a utilization review doctor who has not even examined the employee, an employer might well prefer to proceed directly to an examination of the employee by a second opinion surgeon, which is how the dispute will be resolved anyway, in the event of a utilization review denial and employee objection. In addition, utilization review may take up to 14 days from the date of the treatment recommendation. (Lab. Code §4610(g)(1).) If the employer waits for the result of utilization review, and it is not completed within 10 days, the employer will have lost the opportunity to object under section 4062(b).

If a utilization review report recommends denying surgery, and the employee timely objects, thereby precipitating the second opinion process under section 4610(g)(3)(A), any second opinion process begun as a result of the employer’s objection will also resolve the employee’s objection to the utilization review denial. This situation will arise in cases such as the present one, where the employer both conducts utilization review and objects under section 4062(b).

The Medical Unit erred when it rejected and returned defendant’s timely objection and directed defendant to pursue utilization review — a decision which was properly discretionary on defendant’s part. The Medical Unit’s responsibilities under section 4062(b) commenced with defendant’s initial objection, and there was no legal basis for delaying the second opinion process.
until applicant appealed the utilization review denial.

Because defendant did everything the statute required, and even what it was misled to do by the Medical Unit, we will not deny defendant its right to a second opinion, for failure of the Medical Unit or the second opinion surgeon to meet the statutory timelines. We will allow the process to continue, completing the record for the WCJ’s determination. As we said in Willette v. Au Electric Corp., supra, 69 Cal.Comp.Cases 1298, 1309, “in view of the relative newness of the statutory procedure, we will for purposes of this opinion forgive any failure to date to comply with the relevant statutory deadlines and we will not now address any potential consequences of failures to comply with the statutory timelines in the future.” We likewise forgive, in this case, applicant’s March 3, 2006 objection to the employer’s February 17, 2006 denial of surgery — an objection that would otherwise be untimely, pursuant to our decision herein.
For the foregoing reasons,

IT IS ORDERED, as the Decision After Reconsideration of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, that the April 18, 2006 Findings of Fact and Order is RESCINDED, and the matter is RETURNED to the trial level for further proceedings and decision by the WCJ consistent with this opinion.

BRASHER, Deanna
CONCURRING OPINION OF COMMISSIONER RABINE

I concur. I write separately to add the following comments.

The memorandum of the Medical Unit dated March 3, 2006, is a classic “underground regulation.” It is a standard of general application adopted by the Administrative Director through her Medical Unit to interpret and make specific provisions of Labor Code sections 4062(a) and 4062(b) and to govern their procedure. Thus, it is a “regulation” pursuant to Government Code section 11342.600 and subject to the Administrative Procedure Act (Government Code sections 11340 et seq.). See Rea v. Workers’ Comp. Appeals Bd. (Milbauer) (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 625 [70 Cal.Comp.Cases 312].

The Administrative Director has not complied with the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act. Nor has she complied with the public hearing requirements of Labor Code sections 5307.3 and 5307.4. Therefore, the memorandum is void on its face, and the Medical Unit may not rely on it to refuse to select an orthopedic surgeon or neurosurgeon, as required by Labor Code section 4062(b).
